

Scott Harvey- Biography

Scott Harvey is a facilitator who brings a significant range of professional and academic qualifications to the team as well as over 20 years of hands on experience as a senior public sector manager delivering change in several central government programmes. These included moving an organization to agency status and, most recently, the design and implementation of a turnaround intervention for the better integration of specialist teams.

Scott has recently left government employment and is currently delivering leadership and management development and, individual coaching and mentoring to clients in education, local government, commercial business, police and central government. His work also includes development and delivery of course materials for non-graduate and post-graduate management qualifications up to Level 8. Recent candidates he trained and assessed include managers in ECM services, commissioning, and in Family Centres.

Scott's last public sector employee roles included leadership of the HR Strategy, Skills Management and People Supply teams of a central government department, Programme Management of major cultural change (he is PRINCE 2 qualified), and being Head of profession and business change manager for a group of specialists. These roles included culture shift across a very wide range of professional disciplines and engagement with a variety of cultural perspectives.

His links with education have been developed over 10 years and include advisory roles with a number of organizations. These connections include his governorship in one of the largest FE colleges in the UK, and range from pre-school to post-graduate.

A qualified Emotional Intelligence coach and psychometric assessor, he includes amongst his qualifications, Fellowship of both the Chartered Management Institute and the Institute of Leadership and Management. CIPD have invited him to speak nationally on a number of occasions and he has had articles published on organisational change and development. His links with the health sector are kept current by a wife in first line care and having a daughter who is a junior doctor.